What's New In NoVirusThanks File Governor?

The name says it all: NoVirusThanks File Governor (or NFO) is designed to allow you to unlock locked files. If you know what is meant by a locked file, you will agree that such files are files that are being used by another application or process that is running on the computer. Usually these locked files are generated by the administrator and are therefore inaccessible, however, in some cases they may be caused by users who accidentally or on purpose remove the original owner's permissions. Needless to say, the problem is always the same: the user will be locked out and cannot access the file they are trying to work on. Unfortunately, there is no quick way of fixing this, as such files need to be accessed, otherwise they will cause the computer to crash. What is NoVirusThanks File Governor? This is a utility that can unlock locked files on a Windows platform. The main goal of this tool is to enable the user to access a file which has been locked by a different process or app. The process in question should be terminated in order for the file to be unlocked, in addition to the removal of all data associated with the locked file. What are the criteria that NoVirusThanks File Governor needs to meet? Firstly, the program must be compatible with the Windows operating system. It should have no difficulties in working in the 64-bit and 32-bit operating systems. For the actual process of unlocking the file, the program must be compatible with all versions of Windows, including Windows 8, Windows 7 and Windows Vista. What is the interface of NoVirusThanks File Governor? Like all software, it consists of a menu bar and a window in which the contents of the file system will be displayed. At the top of the interface, you will find buttons that will enable you to start, stop and pause the application. The menu bar features options for help, uninstall, the access to the Task Manager, the Registry Editor, the Windows Explorer shell and the system properties. What are the functions of NoVirusThanks File Governor? The main job of the program is to unlock files that have been locked by another application or process. In order to do this, it must be possible to identify the process which is holding the lock on the file. All you need to do is to click on the Start button and navigate to the Control Panel and click on System. Once the System Properties window has opened, click on the Open button in the window that appears on the right. A list of all processes is displayed, along with detailed information about each one. If the process in question is the one that is locking the file, you will be able to locate it and terminate it. Another feature of the utility is to check for missing DLLs. Whenever a process is not loaded because the required DLL has not been found, an error message is displayed, which means that the user needs
